New York Governor Bids
for National Support in Albany Speech

U. S. LEADERLESS

Both Business and Government Are Stagnant,
He Declares

ALBANY, N. Y.—(AP)—Addressing the New York legislature at its opening session Wednesday, Governor Roosevelt declared for a new social order in which he proposed that business and industry "be given a new leadership which will help them and at the same time give a definite recognition to a new economic balance, based on the right of every individual to make a living out of life."

While the governor devoted most of his address to state legislation, he also used it to outline his program for stabilizing the business of the nation. As one of the leading candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination, Governor Roosevelt said "more than two years have gone by and the leaders in both government and business have shown us few plans for reconstruction of a better-ordered civilization in which economic freedom of the individual will be assured."

He said in recent years the economic freedom of the individual had been swallowed up in the specialization of industry, agriculture and distribution, with over-production on one hand and starvation and nakedness on the other.

Increasing concentration of wealth and the power that wealth controls, do not guarantee intelligent or fair use of either, he said.

Murder Suspects Ordered Released

The Case Against Alleged Slayers of Cattleman Apparently "Blown Up"

HOT SPRINGS.—W. F. Martin and A. M. (Buddy) Jenkins, two of the four suspects arrested at Houston and Dallas, Texas, Saturday in connection with the murder and robbery of Preston Austin, wealthy Texas cattleman, here September 26, 1929, were ordered released from custody Tuesday night by Prosecuting Attorney Houston Emory of Hot Springs.

Emory sent the following message to Percy F. Heard, chief of police at Houston: "Grand jury still investigating Austin case. Advise release of W. F. Martin and Buddy Jenkins pending further investigation by grand jury."

The prosecuting attorney did not comment on the telegram.

Jenkins was released immediately upon receipt of Emory's message. Martin has been at liberty on $2,500 bond since Monday.

W. S. (Shilo) Scrivener and Walter Shanks are the other suspects arrested at the request of Hot Springs officers in connection with Austin's murder. Shanks was arrested at Dallas. Scrivener is in jail at Houston awaiting trial on a charge of murder. It was disclosed that he was in jail on the day Austin was murdered.

Officers were reluctant Tuesday night to discuss their decision to release Martin and Jenkins. It is the general belief here that "the whole case has blown up."

Alleged Hijacker Is Arrested Here

Walter Turner, 30, Seized
After Purchasing of Auto in Hope

Walter Turner, 30, wanted by Texas authorities on a hijacking charge, was arrested by Hempstead and Nevada county officers here Tuesday night after a four-months' vigil.

Turner, known under the aliases of "Charles Turner," "Coy Lane" and "Little Sheriff ayley," had been named in a felony warrant issued from Canton, Texas.

He was taken to Texarkana Wednesday by Sheriff E. H. Weaver of Nevada county and Deputy Sheriff Clarence E. Baker of Hempstead.

Turner is the son of Will Turner, who lived on a farm near Red river, this county, until last week when he moved into Nevada county. The son had not lived regularly with his father in recent years.

Officers had been on the lookout for Walter Turner for the last four months, they said, because of the Texas warrant. Turner appeared in Hope Tuesday and bought a used car from Hope Auto company. He was accompanied by a woman. They went across the street to Taylor's cafe, and were eating when officers arrested the man.

Officers found $65 in cash and a revolver on Turner.

The woman was not held in connection with the charges facing Turner, and Wednesday she was reported to have driven the car out of town.

Blanket of Snow Covers Midwest

Towns Isolated, Roads
Blocked, Schools Closed
in Many Sections

KANSAS CITY.—(AP)—Approaching northwest winds threatened to increase the rigors of winter in Midwest and Southwest states, lying Tuesday night beneath a rapidly thickening blanket of snow.

Isolated towns, blocked roads, a fatal train wreck, dismissed schools, and a threat of floods in rising rivers, have resulted from the snowstorm and preceding heavy rains which visited parts of Nebraska, Minnesota, Western Iowa, Western Missouri, Central and Southwestern Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico.

The snow reached its maximum depth of 18 inches at Guyton in the Oklahoma Panhandle, where great drifts put a stop to motor travel. The Washita river left its bank near Paul's Valley, Okla. At Sallisaw, the wreck of a Kansas City Southern passenger train, which killed the engineer, E. Benjamin, was attributed to landslides caused by heavy rains.

The western Kansas prairie towns of ratt, Dodge City, Garden City, Great Bend, Liberal, Concordia and Osborne, where 14 inches fell, were reported snowbound in blinding storms today. In this section snow was reported falling too rapidly for the use of plows clearing highways.

Snow ceased at Dodge City late Tuesday as it did at Amarillo, Texas, where 12 inches fell, blocking streets and causing school authorities to warn pupils by radio not to leave home.

In Texas the Trinity river reached flood stage near Dallas by a rise of 11.7 feet in 24 hours. The Texas Panhandle generally was under a foot of snow, with rains falling throughout the rest of the state.

The snow was general throughout New Mexico, extending into southwestern Colorado, where eight to 10 inches fell. A raw wind swept the rest of the state. At Omaha eight inches of snow fell. The temperature dropped Tuesday to four degrees above zero at Valence, Neb.

Democrat Elected In New Hampshire

W. H. Rogers Defeats Former Gov. J. F. Bartlett in Race for Congress

MANCHESTER, N. H.—(AP)—William H. Rogers, wet Democrat, Tuesday was elected to the Congressional seat made vacant by the death of Representative Fletcher Hale, Republican, of the First New Hampshire district. He defeated former Governor John F. Bartlett, Republican, 27,453 to 24,505.

Rogers, the first Democrat to represent New Hampshire in Congress in 10 years, also was the last Democrat to serve in the House. In 1922 he provided a political upset by being elected to the House of Representatives in the normally Republican district.

Weather conditions played an important part in the special election. Heavy snow and severe cold in the rural Republican strongholds kept many from the polls, while Rogers piled up a commanding lead in the cities.

A tide of Democratic votes in Manchester and Somersworth swept Rogers into office. He carried Manchester the largest city in the state, by 3,941, and piled up leads in the other cities in the district, with the exception of Portsmouth, Bartlett's home.

Rochester and Laconia, normally Republican, went Democratic by small majorities, as did Dover, a political fighting ground.

Rogers election made the count in the lower house: Democrats 220; Republicans 214; Farmer-Labor 1.

and Mrs. Evan Wray who accompanied Miss Mary Arnold.

During the business session, Miss Maude Lipscomb was elected recording secretary and Miss Jack Porter elected corresponding secretary, to fill unexpired terms of members who had asked for a leave of absence.

Miss Arnold told of having attended the annual birthday party of the Washington B. & P. W. club, which was a marked success despite the very inclement weather, and a meeting of the Texarkana B. & P. W. club just before Christmas. Dr. Etta E. Champ-lin read an interesting letter from Miss Mary Elington Arnold, a former member, who is now connected with a government hospital for Indians, at Hayward, Wis.

Following discussion of numerous business matters, it was announced that Mrs. Frank Hicks would have shown a live blue grass on Jan. 19 at the Barlow Hotel.

WIVES ARE SISTERS

One Brother-in-Law Held for Murder of the Other

Noah Webb, farmer, living in Doyle in northern Hempstead county, was shot and killed Tuesday night by his brother-in-law, Elery Mills, Dierks, Howard county.

Mills was captured in Nashville, Tenn. in the night by Sheriff Roy Mills and Deputy Sheriff Oscar Reese, Howard county, and turned over to Hempstead county officers. He brought him to the county jail in Washington. The county was investigated by the Hempstead sheriff and coroner, John L. Wilson and Dr. H. Weaver.

Arrested at Nashville, Mills was arrested as he drove into Nashville. He was wet up to his knees, officers said, having walked a mile and a half from the Webb house to the car.

Webb, mortally wounded, was found by neighbors, placed in a car and started for a Prescott hospital, but he died on the way.

According to the story officers told the Nashville News, and relayed to the Hope Star, Wednesday, by the newspaper, Mills shot Webb through a window of his home with a shotgun, which is five miles east of Nashville on highway No. 24 in Hempstead county.

Trouble Between Men
Webb's wife was placed in a sanatorium some time ago for her health, but was released, recently. Officers reported there had been trouble between the men in connection with Mrs. Webb's trip to the sanatorium.

Mrs. Webb was with her sister, Mrs. Mills, at their home in Dierks, when Mills made his fatal trip into Hempstead county to visit Webb, officers reported.

The remote location of the Webb home, combined with impassable rural roads, delayed officers in reporting the result of their investigation, both the Hempstead and Howard county officers still being in northern Hempstead county late Wednesday.

Boy Robbers Stage Wild West Hold-Up

Youth Ranging in Age
From 12 to 20 Escape
With $4,000

DESHLER, Ohio.—(AP)—Overawing officers and citizens who stood in the street nearby, four youths, held up the Deshler State Bank Tuesday and escaped toward the Indian state line with $4,000.

The youths, the oldest not more than 20 and the youngest about 12, drove up to the bank in a roadster. In wild west fashion, they proceeded to rifle the institution.

Pulling up in front of the bank, one of the boys fired his shotgun into the air. Three of the youths dashed into the bank leaving the fourth, about 16, at the wheel of the car.

They ordered the cashier, H. E. Mounthaven, and his assistant, to lie on the floor. Each then took up a station in the banking room and systematically rifled the cash drawers, taking every piece of money, including pennies.

As they started to leave Mounthaven attempted to head them off, but a shotgun charge stopped him. The shot went wild.

Our New Viewpoint

The depression is doing nothing else, it at least is causing a slow but steady and significant shift in the average American's viewpoint on political theories.

In the years of prosperity we went, almost unanimously, for the policy of helping the man at the bottom by boosting the man at the top.

We felt that the best way to provide a reasonable amount of happiness, leisure and contentment for the mass of the people was to give business and finance a free hand. If they prospered greatly, the rest of us would prosper at least a little. To suggest putting any sort of check on industry was to be guilty of heresy.

Lately the opposite theory has been coming into its own again. Such men as Governor Gifford Pinchot have been saying things that sound remarkably like the war-cries of 1912, when great wealth was feared and jealously watched. The pendulum is swinging; a Theodore Roosevelt or a Woodrow Wilson could find a following in the land once more.

Now, it does not mean that an immediate, far-reaching change in national policy is inevitable. It does not necessarily mean that we would be better off if we adopted radical political and economic creeds. It simply means that our political life is in the process of getting shaken down to a more healthy and logical basis.

Many two-party system of popular government the respective parties ought to stand at opposite poles in this matter. There should be a conservative party and a liberal party. In neither way can a democracy function as it should.

During the recent years of high prosperity that condition did not exist. We all went conservative. The politician's first thought was to prove to business that he was "safe." Liberalism had no appeal.

We are getting back, now, to a sounder position. There is about to be a dividing line in public life once more. This will be a good thing for us, no matter which side proves the stronger.

Taxpayers Face Decision—Of Somebody

The Southwest American discusses at length the Arkansas highway department's activities and the dilemma faced by the taxpayer, but here is a paragraph of the editorial that carries the point of most interest to the taxpayers of 61 of the counties of the state:

Arkansas will presently face up to the decision whether it shall go ahead and establish the proceeds of the new one-cent gas tax to the county judges, following their 10 per cent of more out of all highway bond sales, and let it let road district bonds go back to the land for payment in part; or whether it will use all available revenue from gasoline tax and license fees to pay state and road district bonds and other things first.

The indications are that the County Judges Association, a powerful political influence in Arkansas, is going to seek to hold its big divide of highway monies. If that course succeeds the same 6 1/2 million dollars of bonds lifted from the lands and homes of the road districts by the Martineau law will fall back upon the taxpayers.

As it is pretty generally conceded that no more bonds can be sold by Arkansas, the only decent course would seem to be to stop the turnback of some 3 1/2 millions to the county judges, stop all diversion of highway funds to other uses by the legislature or otherwise and in every other possible way bring about an era of economy that will save the land from the highway taxes.

The 14 counties having no bonds have received their full road in roads constructed under the parly plan, these roads cannot be taken up and distributed among the bonded counties whose funds were used to pay bonds, with road construction reduced in proportion. Therefore, no justice could be had if all the counties did not share in carrying the bond burden.

If the state could, then, take over these district bonds, refund and distribute them over a somewhat longer period, together with other steps above designated, it is not improbable that a threatened calamity might be avoided.—Menu Evening Star.

Cutting Wages

A RECENT bulletin from the Alexander Hamilton Institute is of particular value in connection with the pending negotiations over railroad wage scales.

"Unless freight rates are reduced," it says, "a cut in wage rates, which railroad executives are now endeavoring to put into effect, will merely tend to make matters worse by reducing the purchasing power of employed railroad workers."

"Wage cutting does not represent the goal, but the means to the goal—which is a reduction in freight rates. Wage cutting without price cutting results in reduced purchasing power and business contraction. If wages must be cut, this action must be accompanied by lower freight rates."

There is food for thought in that—and not for the railroad executives alone, but for other industries as well.

"Delicious". Fox musical romance, brings Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell to the screen together for the ninth time in their eventful careers.

When "Delicious," the new Gaynor-Farrell musical romance comes to the Saenger Theatre next Sunday and Monday, it may solve the most perplexing problem the motion pictures have had in recent years. The question is whether music will ever take its rightful place on the screen, one which has been the concern of artists, composers and Hollywood technicians since the lack of movement in the earlier musicals drove them from popular favor.

All were agreed that the public wanted music with its screen diet, but none had a constructive idea to offer until Guy Bolton appeared with the original screen story of "Delicious," incorporating many unique ideas for music. Fox Films considered it the perfect vehicle for Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell.

were immediately commissioned to create the words and music to serve as a dramatized accompaniment to the story. The success of the venture depended upon weaving the songs and music so skillfully into the romance that the story action would not be interrupted, the greatest weakness of first musicals.

Weeks of careful creative planning went by, during which time David Butler, director of such earlier musical hits as "Sunny Side Up" and "Imagine," conferred daily with authors and composers in order to provide perfect seven continuity for the highly interesting story and the fascinating tunes. In the end, Butler announced Bolton's script a perfect of screen writing into which George and Ira Gershwin had cleverly woven the music and lyrics of sensational songs.

THREE KINDS OF LOVE BY KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ANN, CECILY AND MARY FRANCES FENWICK live with their grandparents. The sisters have been orphaned since childhood. The grandmothers—known as "ROSA" and "MRS. BROWN"—have long since lost their wits, and the household is supported by Anna's uncle, a miserly old man named ECKHARD, young lawyer, are all depending their marriage though they have been engaged 8 years.

Cecily, 22, is in love with ECKHARD, an engineer, but when he proposes she refuses to name the wedding date because she cannot leave Ann with the financial responsibility of the home.

Mary-Frances, 15, and still in school, strikes up an acquaintance with EARL DEARMOUNT, stock company actor. She meets him secretly on several occasions. The company De Armount is playing with children but he decides to go to the city.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXV

MARY-FRANCES' protestations to Earl might be taken, by the cynical, as proof of the capabilities of a woman's love for supreme self-sacrifice. Though there is this to be considered: he most thrilling drama, with the most beautiful heroine, does come to an end after three or four acts. The curtain falls. People go home. The most exciting novel, with the most charmingly bewitching heroine, can be read through to the end and shelved, and another one can be begun. Plans were evolved for a girls' camp, chaperoned by Ermintrude's mother, in June. Evenings were lengthened toward tennis and swimming. Mr. and Mrs. Hill had a new car and went for drives after dinner, and took Ermintrude and Ermintrude's friends, and stopped on the way home at first stations for milk shakes and hot dogs. But when a true creative artist has labored long on a masterpiece of fantasies and hates like fury to turn it into a batch job.

"Sure, I know," Earl rejoined. "But I kind of been thinking—see? Course, my first idea was to beat it. But I don't know. I got my room rent paid up until the end of next week, and they don't soak you so much for meals around here. I could write a few letters and kind of wait returns, and maybe I could do something in the meantime with those damn—pardon me—educational desks. No," as Mary-Frances attempted an interruption, "wait, hon, leave me tell you. A couple weeks aren't going to make so much difference one way or the other right now. I was thinking that if I'd stick around awhile maybe you'd feel different about that class little rediville act of yours."

"Well, you said I was going with him? I must say, Ermintrude—" "Well, you talk about it all the time. All the time."

"I don't. Last Wednesday I just barely told you that he was being sent to me. And yesterday today I just barely mentioned it again. Of course, if you don't want me to tell you anything at all, any more, why, I won't. Of course—" "I don't care if you tell me," said Ermintrude. "Only I do kind of like you've got this Earl awfully on the brain. If I talked about Peter every living minute of the day and night, you'd get sick of it, too, I'll bet. I guess maybe I love Peter as much as you love your old Earl, but I certainly haven't got him on the brain."

"Peter!" said the outraged Mary-Frances. "Why, Ermintrude Hill! Are you still thinking about Peter Morrison? Just because he asked you to his birthday party the first one, and wrote a note to you the next day, and gets red when he meets you on the street? That's different. That's entirely different. That's just childish—that's all that is. Childish. You don't know the first thing about real, true, deep, passionate love such as ours."

Startlingly Ermintrude replied, "Oh, I don't know as you know so much about love, either, and point her chin out propositionally."

IT was Saturday morning. They were marketing to the store to do some marketing for Ermintrude's mother. Mary-Frances stopped, stood still. "Well, if I don't," she demanded, "who does?"

"Older people, I guess," said Ermintrude, and tried to mask iconoclasm, flagrant, with insouciance.

"Older people!" Mary-Frances, shaken, flung it from her.

"Come on. We got to hurry, mother said. Mother said," continued Ermintrude, as if by chance, and happening to be on the subject of mother, anyway, "that younger people didn't. Last night Mrs. Mattson had to go over town to see her daughter-in-law to borrow a couple of covers for her bridge tables this afternoon, so we took her over in the new car. And she was worrying about her grandchildren, the twins, and she said modern girls didn't regard love as right, or something."

"I don't remember just what she said. I was riding in front with daddy and not supposed to be listening. And mother said something, and Mrs. Mattson said they didn't understand about real love, and mother said she guessed they did as much as the girls of her period had, or even Mrs. Mattson's period. And Mrs. Mattson said why, or what did mother mean? And mother said she was becoming more and more convinced that people had to have been married 10 years, at least, and had a baby or two, and maybe even lost one (she was thinking about my little brother, Danny, I guess), before they even began to suspect the meaning of love, let alone understand it or know the first thing about it."

"Oh, well," Mary-Frances simply flicked that away with a feathery gesture and a lifted shoulder and a turned-up nose. "Of course, if you think your mother knows more about love than noted poets like Laurence Hope, and Mr. Browning, and Ella Wheeler Wilcox and everybody, there's just no use in talking to you at all."

"POETS, noted or not," contended Ermintrude, "can't mean everything they write—they'd go cuckoo if they did. They just write different ways, hoping to please different people—or for some reason. I don't know why. But you don't have to believe every word they write, like it was in the Bible, do you? Besides that, I guess maybe there are a few people in the world worth taking advice from besides poets. And if you could hear what my daddy says about my mother, I guess, maybe, you might think she was one of them."

"Who said I never took advice from anybody but poets?" Mary-Frances demanded. "I think your mother is an awfully nice lady, Ermintrude. But I guess she wasn't the sort of the south when she was a girl. Now, my grandmother—" "I know. You told me. My mother didn't live in the south."

"Well, Rosalie did. In South Carolina. And I asked her just about how people knew for when they were in love, and she said to me, 'What she said, and she talked for pretty half an hour on the subject, tainly didn't sound much like your mother had to say about married 10 years and babies all. And if age is all you go by, I guess Rosalie is may little older than your mother.'"

Ermintrude, not barren of remarks, "Miss Alderman was as hops when you cut basket the other day."

"I didn't feel like rowdy around," Mary-Frances replied, sipped spectacularly. "I had a poetry to copy."

"You'll be sorry, though, if it thanks you in gym."

"I don't know," said Mary-Frances, deliberately dreamy, one fears, deliberately vexatious, might be far away—married, living my own life by having career with Earl, or—anything that time."

SMALL dining tables were set in a tiled terrace, and there were a pool and a fountain and smooth green lawn, and away the distance Mount Hood loomed warm pink against a blue sky.

Ann brought her eyes back from the mountain to look again at Peter across the table from her. He handsome and wise and strong smiling, and she loved her. He smiled, too, and said, "Phil, dear, adore this place. However did I find it, away out here?"

"A friend of mine told me she had. There's dancing, later, inside we care to stay."

"Let's! But—can we? It been so long since we have danced. How long?"

"Too long. We do get into sort of forget about good times, but we don't."

"Perhaps. But during the winter there isn't much to do. We do care for public dances."

"No. But we could go places, dine, as we're doing this evening, and dance, if—"

"If what?" she asked, but continued smiling, because she did not know what Phil had begun to say. "If you had the proper things to wear to the better places, we're always getting dinner home, or too tired."

"If we'd plan," he said, "will, after this. We'll have times this summer, and we'll then go next winter. What do you say?"

"If you say so," she said, "I'll be there."

"I'll be there," she said, "I'll be there."

"I'll be there," she said, "I'll be there."

Rev. J. D. Copeland, opened his year work in Blevins last month, having been named as pastor of the Blevins Church of Christ. He preached an impressive sermon, using as his text "There is a Work That I Can Do."

Truck Growers of Blevins Convene

Plan Acreage of Radishes and Tomatoes for Car Lot Shipments

A public meeting of truck growers living along the Prescott Northwestern Railroad in the Blevins territory was held in the auditorium of the Blevins school Thursday night.

Plans for planting truck crops this spring were discussed. All farmers in this section plan to plant an acreage of radishes and had last Monday set as the day to begin plowing their land. The rain Sunday night, Monday and Tuesday night however has delayed this planting and it is not known now when the main part of this crop will be planted.

A plan is expected to be worked out in this section, whereby tomato growers will grow their own plants. A few farmers have in the past grown their own plants with success and a considerable saving in plant cost is expected should this method be adopted.

The outlook for truck crops is said to be somewhat uncertain and the acreage will not be unusually large in this section this year, some of the growers said.

Creek Stops Traffic Tuesday

Trucks Stranded on Both Sides of the Stream

Water was the topic of conversation Tuesday—this subject arising from the overflow of the creek between Blevins and McCaskill.

It has been impossible since Monday. A mile and a half of road was under water Tuesday, and the depth of which was estimated and residents of Blevins and McCaskill were badly damaged.

Those who have lived in this territory for years report that this is the highest they have known the water to rise.

There was a standstill Tuesday on this road and as there is no bridge over the creek, the school children who are transported from Blevins each day were forced to wait.

Two buses are operating on this route each day carrying the children.

Water is expected to be receded Wednesday morning. If the bridges over the creek will be resumed, the school children will be able to get to school.

Powerful Arc Is Feature of Studio

W. O. Shipley Has Used Artificial Light for Photos 16 Years in Hope

One of the vital factors in studio photography is correct artificial lighting. The Shipley Studio, operated by Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Shipley, has a powerful arc-lamp which reminds one of a motion-picture set. It produces a brilliant white light on one set of controls, and on another turns forth a red light for use with panchromatic plates that are sensitive to all the colors in the spectrum.

Mr. Shipley, noted for his fine studio portraits, introduced artificially lighting for studio work in Hope 16 years ago, and was one of the first to become expert at it in Arkansas.

Prior to taking up professional photography Mr. Shipley was an interior decorator, producing mural paintings for some of the finest hotels in the country 20 years ago. He still uses this art in retouching photos, and making occasional original paintings from scenes visited on vacation with Mrs. Shipley.

A number of universities and colleges that lost money on the football season are beginning to think that perhaps the game was over-emphasized, after all.

Advisory Committee of McCurtain to Meet

IDABEL, Okla.—The quarterly meeting of the McCurtain county advisory committee will be held in Idabel, Friday, January 8.

The committee is composed of the women's department of home economy work and the men's work of agriculture and livestock.

Southeast district home demonstration agent, Miss Lemna Maloney, and W. J. Green, district agent, will give a summarized outlook of work for 1932, and ways and means of carrying out the year's projects.

Jots Around Shover

Schools are resuming their regular duties, since the holidays are over and everyone no doubt expects to make and keep many new resolves as the New Year has begun.

Everyone is glad to be able to travel the roads again and not get "hung up" in the deep ruts. The roads have been dragged out this way.

George Crews and others have been doing some good work on the roads, which improved the condition very much.

P. F. Otwell, son Milton, and George Crews were in Hope Saturday.

H. B. Sanford spent Saturday with his son Silas and family in Hope.

Arthur Rogers of Hope was calling on friends in this vicinity one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest McWilliams were Sunday callers in this vicinity.

A severe rain fell here last Wednesday morning. No damage here but quite a wind accompanied the rain a short distance south.

Harold Sanford and family visited Mrs. Sanfords brother, Johnny Camp and family, near Hinton, Wednesday and Thursday and found that the chimneys on the house were blown over and out buildings unroofed.

Mrs. Hattie Crews and daughters, Bonnie and Helen were Saturday afternoon visitors at H. B. Sanfords.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Caudle and children, Wilburn and Euland were New Year's eve callers in the Harold Sanford home.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Crews a family of Hope, Mo., and Mrs. Tom Gill of Brownwood, Tex., spent a day recently with Mrs. Katie Crews and son, George and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Penny Otwell entertained with a party New Years night.

Thad Vines and Earl Arnold have each moved to their new locations in this vicinity.

Quite a number of the young people were entertained at the Thad Vines home Sunday afternoon.

We failed unintentionally to note that Mr. and Mrs. V. M. England entertained their family to a nice Christmas dinner.

After going to England in search of peace, Mahatma Gandhi finally sailed for home with the threat that India and Britain may come to blows. It is very difficult to fight a war with patience.

Compress Expects 63,000 on Season

Hope Plant Still Has 23,937 Bales of 1931 Cotton in Stock

The first year has been a good one for Union Compress & Warehouse Co., Manager H. O. Kyler's organization, having handled 55,399 bales of cotton through Tuesday, January 5.

The compress expects the total to reach 60,000 to 65,000 bales before all of the 1931 crop is cleared in this section. Cotton is received locally the year 'round, but the 1931 movement passed its peak more than a month ago. For several weeks it fell-fall the receipts were running above 1,000 bales a day. Receipts since then have averaged 500 to 700 bales a week.

There are 23,937 bales in stock as of Wednesday, January 6—which is close to the capacity of the Hope plant.

Sees Big Boom—Or World Crash

Sir George Paish, noted British economist, predicts the greatest era of prosperity in history is just ahead if world governments take proper action, but he warns that the international economic and credit fabric will crash within two months if they continue their present course. He suggests rehabilitation measures, bank guaranty acts and revision of German reparations.

Merchants Association Formed at Nashville

NASHVILLE, Ark.—The Nashville Retail Merchants Association, affiliated with the National Retail Merchants Association, has been organized here with nearly all the local business and professional men as members. Mineral Springs, Ark., will probably be included in the association.

The association began functioning January 1. R. W. Tynall is secretary and active manager.

Plan for Election in Columbia County

MAGNOLIA, Ark.—Mrs. John W. Rhee, of Waldo, chairman of Columbia County Women's Democratic Club, announces the title judges and clerks appointed to serve in Columbia county for the special election to be held January 15, will be expected to render the service voluntarily.

This service will mean a great saving to the counties of Arkansas and will make it possible to hold elections in counties which are without funds for the purpose.

Governor Farnell, the Republican state committee and the Women's Democratic Club of Arkansas have made the appeal to the judges and clerks that they serve without pay.

Former Pike Sheriff Recovers From Injury

NASHVILLE, Ark.—J. B. Chaney, former sheriff of Pike county, now living at Murfreesboro, is again full power of speech, according to physicians who attended him after a serious auto accident near Stuttgart on November 8.

Mr. Chaney has returned to his home at Murfreesboro after a slow recovery at Nee, where he was en route for a deer hunt. An injury to his head, besides endangering his life for several weeks, rendered him powerless to speak, but he has in a large part overcome this, it is said.
